Dear Friends of Microenterprise:

Over the past eight years, the Clinton Administration has worked to support and promote the important role of microenterprise in the United States. As part of this effort, President Clinton initiated the creation of the Federal Interagency Workgroup on Microenterprise. Over the past 2 years, 15 agencies that fund microenterprise programs or set policy impacting the availability of credit for microenterprise have met on a quarterly basis to discuss how to improve program coordination and better serve the microenterprise field.

This publication is one of the products of the Workgroup. Thirteen member agencies are included in the program overview. This resource guide is intended to serve practitioners and others in the microenterprise industry by providing information on: (1) Federal programs and how to access these resources; (2) the work of successful microenterprise development organizations through case studies; and (3) key or common definitions used by Federal agencies administering microenterprise support programs.

Microenterprise development has emerged as an important grassroots strategy for creating economic opportunity and revitalizing communities. Individuals are learning to become business people and gaining access to credit to support their businesses. This, in turn, augments income and creates jobs in communities. With the support of the Clinton Administration, state and local government, foundations, financial institutions and other stakeholders, the microenterprise industry has grown significantly over the past eight years. A 1999 survey by the Aspen Institute reported that there were 341 microenterprise programs in the United States located in 46 states and the District of Columbia. By contrast, in 1992 the Aspen Institute identified 108 microenterprise programs nationwide - representing a three-fold increase.

Please join us in celebrating the successes of the microenterprise industry, as well as promoting the future growth of industry through this publication and the efforts of all of our Federal agencies.

Entrepreneurship

The concept of 'microenterprise' development has its roots in the recognition of a previously untapped market - skilled or motivated individuals who could provide desired services to the public but lacked access to traditional forms of credit and, in many cases, business and financial expertise. The microenterprise theory is simple - loan these individuals small amounts of money for business start-up costs, make the loan terms affordable, and give them business training and support. This formula has proven to be a success. Many individuals have borrowed as little as $50 to $500 for equipment or raw materials, learned basic accounting and bookkeeping skills, and successfully launched their own self-supporting small business.

Today the term 'microenterprise' is commonly used to describe a business with up to five employees, which requires $25,000 or less in start-up capital, and does not have access to the traditional commercial banking sector. Many aspiring microentrepreneurs have little formal business training and varying levels of education. Thus, the training and technical assistance provided by microenterprise programs can often be the biggest factor in the success of a new business. In addition, microenterprise programs offer access to credit either directly or by forming partnerships with community organizations such as banks and financial intermediaries that offer loans and financial products. Microentrepreneurs gain access to markets through marketing, sales concepts, and networking, which are vital to the success of their business. Finally, business counselors continue to work with entrepreneurs to evaluate the development of their microenterprise and keep it on the road to growth and success. This combination of strategies has resulted in the empowerment and self-sufficiency of thousands for whom access to financial capital had previously been extremely limited.

While the first microenterprise lending pioneers operated in developing countries, microenterprise strategies have also proven to be effective in the more developed U.S. economy. Micro-entrepreneurship may provide full-time employment for those in poorer urban or rural communities, or a part-time income supplement for low-wage jobs. Successful American microentrepreneurs include retailers in ethnic communities who provide specialized goods, artisans and craftsmen, individuals who provide personal or business services, and a variety of businesses in isolated urban or rural communities where few products are readily available.

The federal government's recognition and support of the microenterprise model has helped spur the growth of microenterprise programs across the United States. Federal agencies have been able to assist individuals through community-based organizations that provide microloans and training to microentrepreneurs. These federal agencies, forming the Interagency Workgroup on Microenterprise Development, encourage the continued development of microenterprise in America through policymaking, support, technical assistance and funding for microenterprise programs. This publication illustrates how the federal programs are implemented and how aspiring entrepreneurs can access resources.

Seven agencies in the Interagency Workgroup on Microenterprise Development offer funding programs and/or resources that target a specific segment of the microenterprise population based on the overall mission of the agency. The agencies are:

United States Department of Agriculture

United States Department of Commerce

United States Department of Health and Human Services

United States Department of Housing and Urban Development

United States Department of Labor

United States Department of Treasury

United States Small Business Administration

Six other agencies in the Interagency Workgroup on Microenterprise Development regulate the nation's financial institutions:

Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System

Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation

Federal Housing Finance Board

National Credit Union Administration

Office of the Comptroller of the Currency

Office of Thrift Supervision

These regulatory agencies provide training and outreach programs. They encourage and enable financial institutions to become active partners in microenterprise programs at the local level. The National Credit Union Administration is unique among these regulatory agencies in that it is authorized to make loans and grants to its member institutions. These agencies' policies and community development programs promote and support the continued participation of financial institutions in microenterprise development.

The Program Overviews section of this publication describes the work of each agency in the microenterprise effort. The focus of each program is explained and an outline of applicant eligibility requirements is provided. In some cases the federal funds reach individuals through intermediary organizations. In those situations, persons interested in learning more about a program at the local level can obtain additional information by calling or writing the contacts listed in the Appendix of this publication.

Access to loans and grants is only part of the microenterprise story. Education and technical assistance are also integral components of microenterprise programs. Many microenterprise programs offer training in critical business skills such as budgeting, basic bookkeeping, tax preparation, business planning, marketing and advertising. Some microenterprise programs provide assistance in the loan application process.

This training and assistance may be provided through one-to-one counseling, classroom sessions or through peer group exchanges. Participants in microenterprise programs are often required to successfully complete such business-related courses in order to secure approval of a microloan. Microentrepreneurs generally receive continued technical support beyond the initial stages of their business development as they strive to expand their business.

The Case Studies section of this publication provides accounts of aspiring microentrepreneurs in cities and towns across America who have benefited from microenterprise programs supported by federal agencies. The programs, the people and the pride in their accomplishments are real. These stories confirm the effectiveness of microenterprise as well as the spirit of partnership and cooperation which often develops between the microentrepreneur and those who contribute to his or her growth in the business world.

The Corporation for National Service and the United States Agency for International Development (USAID) are also member agencies in the Interagency Workgroup on Microenterprise Development. Although they make important contributions in the microenterprise field, their mission is outside the scope of this publication. The Corporation for National Service recruits and trains the Volunteers in Service to America (VISTA), some of whom may ultimately work in a microenterprise-related project. The work of the VISTA volunteers is highlighted in the Case Study provided by the National Credit Union Administration. USAID is active exclusively in the international microenterprise arena.

The federal agencies participating in the Interagency Workgroup on Microenterprise Development hope the information and resources in this publication will contribute to the continued growth of domestic microenterprise programs. Potential microentrepreneurs may find an avenue to pursue their dream of owning their own business. Community-based organizations, financial institutions and support groups – from non-profit concerns to individuals with business-related skills – may find they can assist in the training and mentoring of aspiring microentrepreneurs. The contacts listed in this publication, both at the Washington, D.C., headquarters and the local level, are genuinely committed to the support and expansion of efforts in the microenterprise field. We encourage you to contact them to answer your questions and provide assistance.

Rural Business-Cooperative Service Business Programs

The Rural Business-Cooperative Service Business Programs work in partnership with private sector and community-based organizations to provide financial assistance and business planning. The seven business programs offer help to fund projects that create or preserve quality jobs and/or promote a clean rural environment. The programs' financial resources are often leveraged with those of other public and private sector credit source lenders to meet business and credit needs in under-served areas. Eligible recipients of these programs include individuals, corporations, partnerships, cooperatives, public bodies, nonprofit corporations, Indian tribes and private companies. All programs are administered through the Rural Development State Office.

Here is a brief description of each of the seven business programs offered.

Business and Industry Direct Loan Program

The Business and Industry Direct Loan Program provides loans to public entities and private parties that cannot obtain credit from other sources. Loans to private parties can be made for improving, developing or financing business and industry; creating jobs; and improving the economic and environmental climate in rural communities (including pollution abatement). Assistance is available in rural areas (including all areas other than cities of more than 50,000 people and their immediately adjacent urbanized or urbanizing areas). The maximum aggregate Business and Industry Direct Loan amount to any one borrower is $10 million.

Eligible Applicants

Eligible applicants include any legally organized entity, including cooperatives, corporations, partnerships, trusts or other profit or nonprofit entities, Indian tribes or federally recognized tribal groups, municipalities, counties, any other political subdivision of a state, or individuals.

Business and Industry Guaranteed Loan Program

The Business and Industry Guaranteed Loan Program helps create jobs and stimulate rural economies by providing financial backing for rural businesses. The program provides guarantees up to 90 percent of a loan made by a commercial lender. Loan proceeds may be used for working capital, machinery and equipment, buildings and real estate, and certain types of debt refinancing. The primary purpose is to create and maintain employment and improve the economic climate in rural communities. This is achieved by expanding the lending capability of private lenders in rural areas, helping them to make and service quality loans that provide lasting community benefits.

Business and Industry loan guarantees can be extended to loans made by recognized commercial lenders or other authorized lenders in rural areas (including all areas other than cities of more than 50,000 people and their immediately adjacent urbanized or urbanizing areas). Generally, recognized lenders include federal or state chartered banks, credit unions, insurance companies, savings and loan associations, Farm Credit Banks or other Farm Credit System institutions with direct lending authority, a mortgage company that is part of a bank holding company, and the National Rural Utilities Finance Corporation.

The maximum aggregate Business and Industry Guaranteed Loan that can be offered to any one borrower is $25 million.

Eligible Applicants

Eligible applicants include any legally organized entity, including cooperatives, corporations, partnerships, trusts or other profit or nonprofit entities, Indian tribes or federally recognized tribal groups, municipalities, counties, any other political subdivision of a state, or individuals.

Intermediary Relending Program

The Intermediary Relending Program's purpose is to finance business facilities and community development projects in rural areas (including all areas other than cities of more than 25,000 people). The Rural Business-Cooperative Service makes loans to intermediaries who relend funds for business facilities or community development through the establishment of revolving loan funds.

All loan funds received by an intermediary must be relented to ultimate recipients. Interest income and fees may be used for administrative costs, technical assistance to borrowers or debt retirement. All collections from the operation of the established revolving loan fund that are not used for the above authorized expenses must be made available for relending to eligible ultimate recipients.

Loans must be to establish new businesses, expand existing businesses, generate employment opportunities, save existing jobs or create community development projects.

Eligible Applicants

Eligible applicants include private nonprofit corporations, public agencies, Indian groups, or cooperatives that meet the criteria of the program. Ultimate recipients may be private or public organizations or individuals. At least 51 percent of the owners or members of both intermediaries and ultimate recipients must be United States citizens or admitted for permanent residency. Both intermediaries and ultimate recipients must be unable to obtain the proposed loan elsewhere at reasonable rates and terms.

Rural Business Enterprise Grants

Rural Business Enterprise Grants are used to finance and facilitate development of small and emerging private business enterprises located in areas outside the boundary of a city of 50,000 or more and its immediately adjacent urbanized or urbanizing area.

Grant funds may also be used for the acquisition and development of land; construction of buildings, plants, equipment, access streets and roads, parking areas, and utility and service extensions; refinancing; fees for professional services; technical assistance and related training for adults; startup operating costs and working capital; financial assistance to a third party; production of television programs to provide information to rural residents; creation, expansion and operation of rural distance learning networks; and establishment or funding of revolving loan programs.

Eligible Applicants

Eligibility is limited to public bodies, private nonprofit corporations and federally recognized Indian tribal groups. Public bodies include incorporated towns and villages, boroughs, townships, counties, states, authorities, districts, Indian tribes on federal and state reservations, and other federally recognized Indian tribal groups in rural areas. Small and emerging businesses with less than 50 new employees and less than $1 million in gross annual revenues that have, or will utilize, technological innovations and commercialization of new products are eligible for assistance.

Rural Business Opportunity Grants

Rural Business Opportunity Grants provide funds for technical assistance, training and planning activities that improve economic conditions in rural areas. The program's mission is to promote sustainable economic development in rural communities with exceptional needs.

Eligible Applicants

Applicants must be located in rural areas (which includes all areas other than cities of more than 10,000). Nonprofit corporations, public entities, Indian tribes and cooperatives are eligible.

Program

Rural Economic Development Loans

Rural Economic Development Loans are zero-interest loans and grants to Rural Utilities Services-financed telecommunication and electric utilities intended to promote rural economic development and job creation projects. Loan proceeds are used to promote rural economic development and/or job creation projects including project feasibility studies, start-up costs and incubator projects.

Eligible Applicants

Loans are made at the discretion of the Rural Business-Cooperative Service Administrator to any Rural Utilities Services borrower that is not delinquent on any federal debt or in bankruptcy proceeding.

Rural Economic Development Grants

This program provides grants from the Rural Business-Cooperative Service to rural communities through Rural Utilities Service borrowers. The grants are to be used for revolving loan funds for community facilities and infrastructure, and for assistance in conjunction with rural economic development loans.

Rural Utilities Service borrowers receive grants to establish revolving loan funds on a non pass-through basis. The borrowers, in turn, provide zero-interest loans to foster rural economic development. Initial loan funds may be used for projects such as community development, and providing facilities and equipment for education and medical care. Loans made from the repayment of initial loans may be used for any rural economic development purpose agreed to by the borrower and the Rural Utilities Service.

Grant funds may also be used for project feasibility studies and technical assistance; community development assistance; projects that provide education and training to rural residents to facilitate economic development; and projects that provide medical care to rural residents.

Eligible Applicants

Funds are granted to any electric or telecommunication Rural Utilities Service borrower that is not financially distressed, delinquent on any federal debt or in bankruptcy proceedings.

The Minority Business Development Agency (MBDA) of the United States Department of Commerce is the only federal agency created specifically to foster the establishment and growth of minority-owned business in America. MBDA funds Business Development Centers (BDCs) that provide minority entrepreneurs with one-on-one assistance in writing business plans, marketing, management and technical matters, and financial planning to assure adequate financing for business ventures. Staffing the BDCs are business specialists with knowledge and practical experience needed to run successful and profitable businesses.

MBDA also has three Web-based tools – the Resource Locator, the Phoenix-Opportunity Database and the Market Analyst – to respond to the needs of microentrepreneurs throughout the country. The Resource Locator allows microentrepreneurs to search for resources that specialize in starting, operating and expanding businesses. Users are able to search MBDA's database by geographic area for resources such as manufacturing, technology, international trade, electronic commerce or management and technical assistance. The Phoenix Database contains a listing of minority-owned enterprises doing business in the United States. MBDA uses the database in conjunction with the Opportunity Database to match listed minority companies with contracts and other business opportunities via e-mail. Once registered on MBDA's database, minority microentrepreneurs can post opportunities, access contract opportunities and seek business partners. The Market Analyst is available through one of the many local BDCs located throughout the nation. With the help of trained market analysis and business development professionals on staff, a microentrepreneur can conduct extensive market research in a specific geographical area.

Eligible Applicants

Through resource and development centers, MBDA provides assistance to socially or economically disadvantaged groups who own or wish to start or expand their own businesses, including African Americans, Native Americans, Puerto Ricans, Spanish-speaking Americans, Eskimos, Aleuts, Asian Indians, Asian Pacific Americans and Hasidic Jews. Minority business owners interested in locating a Business Development Center, Business Resource Center or MBDA Regional Office in their area may consult http://www.mbda.gov/local_MBDA_centers.html for the nearest location.

The Economic Development Administration, Department of Commerce, was established in 1965 to generate jobs, help retain existing jobs and stimulate industrial, technological and commercial growth in economically distressed areas of the United States. The Economic Adjustment Program is one of the many programs administered by the Economic Development Administration.

The Economic Adjustment Program assists state and local interests in planning and implementing strategies designed to adjust or bring about change to an economy. The program focuses on areas that have experienced or are under threat of serious structural damage to the underlying local economic base. Changes to the local economic base may result from industrial or corporate restructuring, natural disaster, reduced defense expenditures, depletion of natural resources or new federal laws or requirements.

The Revolving Loan Fund Program, one tool of the Economic Adjustment Program, assists small- and medium-sized businesses in economically distressed communities. It gives financial support to eligible intermediaries such as political subdivisions, nonprofit organizations and economic development districts. Intermediaries use program funds to make loans, provide loan guarantees and offer financial assistance for establishing, enhancing and expanding businesses, which often include microenterprises. Funds may also go to public, private and nonprofit organizations for business training, technical assistance and business support services to microentrepreneurs. All grant recipients are required to develop a Revolving Loan Fund Plan summarizing how the Revolving Loan Fund will be used to support the area's comprehensive economic adjustment strategy.

Eligible Applicants

Eligible applicants include states, cities or other political subdivisions of a state, or a consortium of the subdivisions; Indian tribes; institutions of higher learning; and public or private nonprofit organizations or associations acting in cooperation with officials of a state's political subdivision. Complete funding availability information is published annually in the Federal Register. Previous funding levels can be found at www.doc.gov/eda/html/prgtitle.htm. United States Commercial Service: Three Special Initiatives

The Department of Commerce established the United States Commercial Service in 1980 to help U.S. firms, particularly small and medium sized enterprises, expand their markets beyond the United States. Today, the Commercial Service supports U.S. business through its network of 105 domestic and 158 overseas offices in 84 countries. The Commercial Service administers three separate initiatives that provide access to export assistance to the nation's small businesses.

Women in International Trade Initiative

The Women in International Trade Initiative uses the expertise, global network, and experience of the Commercial Service to meet the needs of women in international trade. Through strategic partnerships with women's organizations both in the United States and abroad, the Commercial Service reaches small women-owned businesses that can benefit from export assistance. To help women enter international markets, the Commercial Service leads business development trade missions that introduce women to prequalified sales prospects, agents, distributors, and joint venture partners.

One of the most frequently encountered obstacles for small women-owned enterprises is the lack of qualified personnel to develop the business's export capabilities. The Commercial Service addresses this issue by providing a trade specialist to prepare the company for international business by working at the company for several weeks as a consultant.

Eligible Applicants

All women-owned companies interested in exporting are eligible to participate in the Initiative.

Global Diversity Initiative

The Global Diversity Initiative, created in 1999, seeks to increase the number and capability of minority firms engaged in international trade. The initiative not only results in an increase in the nation's exports, but boosts economic development in minority communities.

The Global Diversity Initiative's Market Entry Program prepares firms to sell products and services internationally by providing training, ongoing consultation and support, and participation in trade events. The Market Entry Program is typically a training program that utilizes a team of local presenters to prepare firms to sell their products and services in identified markets. Subjects covered in the training program include Channels of Distribution, Pricing for Export, Methods of Payment, Documentation and Logistics, Legal Issues, E-Commerce, and Commercial Service programs. International trade specialists from the Commercial Service administer the program in cooperation with federal, state and local partners.

After completing the Market Entry Program, firms are invited to participate in a trade event. Trade Specialists identify trade missions, trade shows, international buyer programs, and/or reverse trade mission opportunities for Market Entry Program participants. These events enable participants to utilize the skills developed from their training and to participate in an event where they meet with prospective buyers or clients. The ultimate goal of the program is for the firms to negotiate and complete an international sale.

Eligible Applicants

To be eligible for participation in the Global Diversity Initiative program, firms may be at any stage of export readiness and must have a potential for success in the international market. An applicant's business should have been in operation for at least two years and offer a product or service suited for export. Firms should have a positive net worth and should have marketing materials, such as brochures.

Rural Export Initiative

Through the Rural Export Initiative (REI), the Commercial Service seeks to provide rural companies with export assistance and global market research to facilitate their access to international trade services and to increase the number of rural companies engaged in exporting. REI helps rural firms overcome the "distance penalty" by using e-commerce and technology-based services such as virtual trade shows and marketing briefings via teleconferencing. As part of its commitment to serving rural firms, the Commercial Service has established 18 Export Assistance Centers in rural areas.

Through REI's Native American Program, the Commercial Service works with Native American communities to introduce small firms to the benefits of international trade. Included in this program are international trade promotion opportunities for Native American products and the Native American Export Incubator Programs in South Dakota, Washington State, Arizona and New Mexico. The goal of the Native American Export Incubator program is to develop export markets for Native American businesses while training them in international business procedures and marketing.

Eligible Applicants

The Rural Export Initiative targets companies located in metropolitan statistical areas that have a population of 150,000 or less. All rural companies interested in exporting are eligible to participate in REI.

The Community Development Block Grant Program provides eligible metropolitan cities and urban counties (called "entitlement communities"), as well as states, with annual direct grants to revitalize neighborhoods, expand affordable housing and economic opportunities, and/or improve community facilities and services, principally to benefit low- and moderate-income persons.

Although the rehabilitation of affordable housing has traditionally been the largest single use of Community Development Block Grant Funds, the program has become an increasingly important catalyst for economic development activities that expand job and business opportunities for lower income families and neighborhoods. It has also moved toward supporting the growth of some of its key partners, primarily nonprofit community-based organizations.

Recipients use Community Development Block Grant Funds to provide direct financial assistance to microenterprises through grants, loans, loan guarantees, and other forms of financial support to establish, stabilize, and expand microenterprise. Micro-entrepreneurs and persons developing microenterprises also benefit from technical assistance, advice, and business support services. Finally, Community Development Block Grant Funds provide general support through such services as peer support programs, counseling, child care and transportation.

Eligible Applicants

Central cities of Metropolitan Statistical Areas, other metropolitan cities with populations of at least 50,000, and qualified urban counties with populations of at least 200,000 are entitled to receive annual grants. Funding is awarded based on assessments of community needs, including income, population, housing overcrowding, age of housing and population growth lag compared to other metropolitan areas. The State Community Development Block Grant Program is a separate component of the program. It provides funds to the states to allocate among localities that do not qualify as entitlement communities.

When unemployment insurance was introduced in the 1930s, unemployed workers could expect to eventually return to their same or similar jobs. Today, many unemployed workers are faced with no prospect of reemployment in their former career fields. In the 1980s, the federal government began exploring various European programs that offer assistance to unemployed workers who want to become self-employed. Based on the European models, the Department of Labor funded pilot projects in Washington State and Massachusetts.

The pilots were a tremendous success and showed that self-employment assistance for the unemployed was cost-effective for the participants, the federal government and society as a whole. In 1993, Congress enacted legislation permitting states to adopt self-employment allowance provisions as part of their state unemployment insurance laws.

States have the flexibility to establish their own Self-Employment Assistance programs within guidelines issued by the Department of Labor, which administers the programs through State Workforce Development Agencies.

Although the programs and eligibility requirements vary slightly from state to state, each program essentially allows unemployed individuals identified as likely to be unemployed long-term the opportunity to establish a microenterprise. Self-Employment Assistance program participants typically have long, solid work histories and find themselves the victims of events such as mass layoffs or plant shutdowns. The Department of Labor provides funds through various sources (such as the recently enacted Workforce Investment Act) that can be used for entrepreneurial training and technical assistance, and the equivalent of unemployment insurance payments during the business training and start-up periods.

Eligible Applicants

The following states have implemented Self-Employment Assistance programs: New York, Maine, Oregon, Delaware, New Jersey, Maryland and Pennsylvania. Unemployed workers in those states should contact their state Department of Labor for information about the program and eligibility requirements.

Community Development Financial Institutions Fund: Three Programs

Community Development Financial Institutions Program

The Community Development Financial Institutions Fund (CDFI Fund) was created in 1994 to expand the availability of credit, investment capital and financial services in distressed urban and rural communities. The CDFI Fund provides capital to institutions that serve distressed communities and low-income individuals. Its activities leverage private-sector investments from banks, foundations and other funding sources.

CDFI Fund initiatives that provide funding to microenterprise organizations are outlined below. Since the CDFI Fund's creation, more than $400 million in awards have been made to community development organizations and financial institutions.

The Community Development Financial Institutions Program (CDFI Program) uses limited federal resources to invest in and build the capacity of private, for-profit and non-profit financial institutions to provide capital and services to underserved people and communities. Institutions such as microenterprise loan funds, community development banks, credit unions, non-profit loan funds and venture capital funds may apply to the CDFI Fund for status as a CDFI. The CDFI Fund invests in CDFIs using flexible tools such as equity investments, loans, grants and deposits, depending upon market and institutional needs.

The CDFI Program has three separate components: Core, Intermediary, and Small and Emerging CDFI Assistance (SECA). The Core Component is the CDFI Fund's main program under which CDFIs, or entities proposing to become CDFIs, may apply for financial and technical assistance. The Intermediary Component is specifically for intermediaries that focus primarily on providing financial assistance to other CDFIs. The SECA Component was designed to build the capacity of CDFIs, or entities proposing to become CDFIs, that have significant potential for generating community development. The SECA Component allows all CDFIs to apply for technical assistance grants and those CDFIs that are small and emerging may apply for both technical assistance grants and limited amounts of financial assistance.

CDFIs provide a range of financial products and services including mortgage financing for first-time home buyers, financing for needed community facilities, commercial loans and investments to start or expand small businesses, loans to rehabilitate rental housing, and financial services needed by low-income households and local businesses. CDFIs also provide technical assistance to small businesses and credit counseling to consumers. CDFIs currently serve rural and urban areas in 49 states and the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

The applicant CDFI must submit a five-year business plan and demonstrate its ability to raise comparable non-federal matching funds. Each applicant is evaluated in a manner similar to a private investor determining the investment-worthiness of an institution. An applicant's ability to create community development impact and execute its Comprehensive Business Plan is part of the CDFI Fund's assessment of the applicant.

Eligible Applicants

Applications for funding under each component of the CDFI Program are accepted once a year. An applicant must be a non-governmental financing entity with community development as its primary mission, serve eligible target markets, provide development services and otherwise meet the requirements set out in 12 C.F.R. § 1805.200. Notices of Funds Availability for funding rounds are published in the Federal Register.

The CDFI Fund accepts applications for CDFI certification on a continuing basis. Eligibility requirements for certification are contained in 12 C.F.R. § 1805.201(b).

Bank Enterprise Award Program

The Bank Enterprise Award (BEA) Program recognizes the key role that traditional financial institutions play in facilitating community development. The program provides incentives for regulated banks and thrifts to invest in CDFIs and to increase their lending, investment and financial services in distressed communities. "Distressed communities" are those that meet minimum income and unemployment criteria under the regulations in effect at the time of application. The program supports the community reinvestment efforts of financial institutions.

The BEA Program seeks to encourage insured depository institutions to invest in CDFIs and to provide lending, investment and service activities aimed at revitalizing distressed urban and rural communities. The CDFI Fund makes awards to selected applicants that:

- invest in or otherwise support CDFIs;
- increase lending and investment activities within distressed communities; or
- increase certain services and assistance within distressed communities.

Activities eligible for awards include deposit liabilities in the form of savings or other demand or time accounts; financial and community services; and loans such as consumer, single-family, multi-family, commercial real estate, business, agricultural and related project investments.

Eligible Applicants

Eligible applicants are depository institutions insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. Applications for Bank Enterprise Awards are accepted once a year. Notices of Funds Availability are published in the Federal Register.

Presidential Awards for Excellence in Microenterprise Development

At the direction of President Clinton, the CDFI Fund designed and implemented a non-monetary award program in 1996 to bring wider attention to the important role and the successes of domestic microenterprise development across America. The Presidential Awards program grew from a commitment of the United States at the United Nations Fourth World Conference on Women, held in Beijing, China, in September 1995.

The Presidential Awards reflect a national commitment to microenterprise development and to enhancing entrepreneurial opportunities for all Americans. By recognizing outstanding microenterprise development and support organizations, the Presidential Awards program advances an understanding of "best practices" in the field of microenterprise development.

Awards are made in the following categories designed to recognize the diverse activities, purposes and challenges that the microenterprise industry faces:

- Excellence in Providing Access to Capital
- Excellence in Developing Entrepreneurial Skills
- Excellence in Poverty Alleviation
- Excellence in Public or Private Support for Microenterprise Development
- Excellence in Program Innovation

Eligible Applicants

Microenterprise Development Organizations—those organizations whose primary purpose is microenterprise development—are eligible for an award in the following categories: Access to Capital, Developing Entrepreneurial Skills and Poverty Alleviation. Eligible applicants for the public or private support award are Microenterprise Support Organizations—entities that do not work directly with microentrepreneurs as their principal activity, but support the efforts of Microenterprise Development Organizations through technical assistance, research and other activities.

Both Microenterprise Development Organizations and Microenterprise Support Organizations are eligible for the Program Innovation awards—floating awards that may be given to no more than two applicants in any one or more of the other award categories.

Applications for the Presidential Awards are accepted once a year. Notices Inviting Applications are published in the Federal Register.

The Microloan Program, originally enacted in October 1991, authorizes the United States Small Business Administration (SBA) to provide loan and grant funding to intermediary lenders and non-lending technical assistance providers. From the original 37 program participants in 1992, the program has grown to include more than 140 intermediaries and non-lending technical assistance providers. The Microloan Program assists women, low-income individuals, minorities, veteran entrepreneurs, business owners and other capable individuals to operate successful business concerns, and assists small business concerns in those areas suffering from a lack of credit due to an economic downturn.

Under the Intermediary Lender part of the Microloan Program, the SBA makes direct and guaranteed loans available to qualified intermediaries. They, in turn, provide small-scale loans, averaging $7,500 or less, to start-up, newly established or growing small business concerns for working capital, materials, supplies or equipment. Intermediary lenders are required to provide business-based technical assistance to microloan borrowers.

The SBA provides grants under the Non-lending Technical Assistance Provider program to eligible nonprofit entities that, together with non-federal matching funds, support intensive marketing, management and technical assistance to low-income clients seeking private sector micro-level financing for their businesses.

In addition, capacity-building funds are available to provide technical assistance to organizations acting as intermediary lenders or having the potential to do so.

Eligible Applicants

An organization may apply for intermediary lender status if it:

- Is a private nonprofit community development corporation, a quasi-governmental economic development entity, or an agency of or a nonprofit entity established by a Native American tribal government;
- Has made and serviced short-term fixed rate loans of not more than $25,000 to newly established or growing small businesses for at least one year; and
- Has at least one year of experience providing technical assistance to its borrowers.

An organization may apply as a Non-lending Technical Assistance Provider if it is capable of providing technical assistance to small businesses and is not an SBA microlender.

A small business must apply directly to the intermediary lender serving its geographic location. A small business is eligible to apply for a microloan if it is a for-profit business that meets SBA-type of business requirements and size eligibility standards.

The United States Small Business Administration (SBA) offers grant funding to private nonprofit economic development organizations to provide financial management, general business management and marketing assistance to women-owned businesses. The SBA's network of 93 Women's Business Centers provides a wide range of services to women entrepreneurs at all levels of business development. Located in 46 states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, American Samoa and the Virgin Islands, the centers provide long-term training and counseling to existing and potential women business owners, many of whom are socially and economically disadvantaged.

Women's Business Centers provide financial, management and marketing services and expertise to women starting or growing their businesses. Each organization offers services and training in accounting and government contracting. Technical assistance, financial counseling, business plan assistance and microlending information are also available.

The centers make a special effort to assist women on welfare become self-sufficient. Many administer programs and workshops in business ownership, other employment or a combination of the two. Some centers offer transportation and child care so women can attend training classes. A few offer classes in the local neighborhoods.

Each center tailors its programs to the needs of its constituency. Many centers have found that providing support services, such as domestic crisis counseling and life skills, makes the biggest difference in whether women remain enrolled in the training courses. Due to a lack of work experience, basic skills and problems must be addressed before business development. Other centers provide business development and support services at the same time.

All of the centers provide individual counseling and access to the SBA's programs and services.

A number of centers are also intermediaries for the SBA's Microloan Program and the Loan Prequalification Program.

The Federal Reserve System's Community Affairs Program was established in 1981. The program provides ongoing outreach, educational and technical assistance services to help financial institutions, community-based organizations, government entities and the public understand and address financial services issues affecting low- and moderate-income persons and communities. The program's mission is to support the Federal Reserve System's economic growth objectives by promoting community development, and fair and impartial access to credit.

Community Affairs Offices (CAOs) are located at the Board and at each of the 12 Federal Reserve Banks. Each CAO establishes its own program and develops specific products and services to meet the informational needs in its regional market. These information products and services fall into three major areas:

- Publications
The CAOs publish a variety of publications that highlight community reinvestment activities and cover topics such as fair lending, and small and micro business technical assistance.
- Conferences, Training and Presentations
The CAOs sponsor and participate in a variety of public forums that provide information and guidance on Community Reinvestment Act-related requirements, and community investment and development opportunities.
- Technical Assistance
The CAOs provide a wide range of technical information on community and economic development, including information on affordable housing development partnerships, and small and micro business lending.

In 1990, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation ("FDIC") established a Community Affairs Program that promotes compliance with the Community Reinvestment Act (CRA) and the fair lending laws by FDIC-supervised institutions. The fair lending laws and regulations were designed to ensure access to credit by all sectors of communities, to prohibit discrimination in lending, and to promote fair lending practices. The FDIC's Community Affairs staff help to ensure equal access to credit, work with lenders and the public to revitalize communities, and serve as intermediaries to further fair lending objectives.

The FDIC's Community Affairs staff are located in Washington, D.C. and in the agency's eight regional offices. Specifically, the staff:

- encourage financial institutions to help meet the needs of their communities, including low-and moderate-income neighborhoods and individuals, consistent with safe and sound operations
- meet regularly with bankers, community organizations, small businesses, and local government leaders to promote partnerships among public and private organizations, to identify local credit needs, and to develop strategies to meet those needs
- support community and economic development initiatives, including microenterprise projects, through their outreach and technical assistance initiatives.
- sponsor and conduct conferences and seminars to help educate bankers and consumers about the CRA and other fair lending laws and regulations
- serve as technical advisors to bank examiners on fair lending issues, and

FDIC promotes banks' compliance with fair lending laws, including the Community Reinvestment Act, through on-site examinations, community outreach, responses to complaints and inquiries, and other efforts.

The Federal Housing Finance Board has regulatory and supervisory oversight responsibility for the 12 Federal Home Loan Banks (FHLBanks). Among other duties, it ensures the safety and soundness of the Federal Home Loan Bank System (System), establishes policy for Community Investment Cash Advances programs and the Community Support Program, and oversees the FHLBanks' financial performance and operations.

Each of the 12 FHLBanks is a government-chartered, member-owned corporation. Members of the System are financial institutions (federal and state-chartered thrift institutions, commercial banks, credit unions and insurance companies) that purchase stock in the FHLBank in whose district they are chartered. Institutions join in order to access long-term advances/loans and to meet liquidity needs. As of March 31, 2000, the System's membership totaled 7,435. Other entities, such as state and local housing finance agencies, may join as associate members.

- Community Lending Programs

The FHLBanks provide low-cost advances/loans (and, in some cases, grants) to members to support the Affordable Housing and Community Investment Cash Advance (CICA) programs. The Affordable Housing Program targets households with incomes below 80 percent of the area median. Targeted incomes in the CICA programs range from 80 to 115 percent of the area median income or another limit established by a FHLBank. CICAs may be used to provide assistance for small businesses; geographically defined beneficiaries (projects located in targeted geographical areas); and individual beneficiaries (projects in which at least 51 percent of the salaries created or retained are at or below the targeted level, or at least 51 percent of the families who benefit from or are provided services are at or below a targeted income level).

- Community Investment Officers

Each FHLBank is required by statute to designate a Community Investment Officer to implement community lending and affordable housing advance programs. Through on-site visits, sponsorship of regional conferences and other means, the Community Investment Officers provide technical assistance and outreach to promote these programs, and help members of the System identify opportunities to expand financial and credit services in underserved neighborhoods and communities.

The National Credit Union Administration (NCUA) created the Office of Community Development Credit Unions in early 1994 to provide assistance to community development credit unions designated as "low income." Federal credit unions that serve low-income groups and underserved areas may apply to NCUA for the "low-income" designation. Among other things, low-income credit unions may participate in special funding programs such as the Community Development Revolving Loan Fund for Credit Unions.

The Community Development Revolving Loan Fund (CDRLF) supports low-income credit union initiatives that stimulate economic development and community revitalization efforts—increased income, education, home and business ownership and employment opportunities. The CDRLF makes reduced rate loans and provides technical assistance grants so the participating credit union may provide needed financial services and help stimulate the economy in the communities they serve. The NCUA's policy is to revolve low-interest loans to qualifying credit unions as often as practical in order to gain maximum impact on as many participating credit unions as possible.

During 1999, the CDRLF granted nine loans totaling $1.9 million. Sixty-nine loans totaling $7.5 million were outstanding at year-end. Also in 1999, the technical assistance grants program, financed with earnings from the CDRLF, provided operational funding for organizational and staff development, marketing, audits and purchase of equipment. CDRLF approved 103 grants totaling $343,500.

Eligible Applicants

A credit union must have a current low-income designation to participate in the CDRLF. The National Credit Union Administration annually publishes measurement standards to be used in awarding the "low-income designation" to credit unions.

The OCC's Community Affairs department encourages national banks to be leaders in providing credit, investments and financial services, including microenterprise development. Its staff assists consumers, particularly in economically disadvantaged communities, to achieve broader access to financial services, and works with bankers and their community development partners to promote community economic development by:

- Providing training and technical assistance on economic and community development lending and investing, financing affordable housing development, and supporting small businesses with start-up and expansion finance and working capital.

The OCC supports the banks' efforts in the microenterprise arena by providing technical assistance to community development intermediaries that promote microenterprise development. The Community Affairs programs provide outreach, educational and technical assistance to national banks on, community development opportunities, issues and partnerships. The Office of Thrift Supervision (OTS) is the primary regulator of all federal and many state-chartered thrift institutions, which include savings banks and savings and loan associations. The OTS was established as a bureau of the Department of the Treasury on August 9, 1989. The OTS has five regional offices located in Jersey City, Atlanta, Chicago, Dallas and San Francisco. Its expenses are funded entirely through assessments and fees levied on the institutions it regulates.

In 1993, the OTS' Community Affairs Program was created to support the thrift industry in helping to meet the credit and financial services needs of the thrifts' communities, particularly those with areas and individuals in greatest need. The program's mission is to actively assist the thrift industry's efforts to meet its obligations under the Community Reinvestment Act, and to provide safe and sound loans, investments and financial services for low- and moderate-income individuals and communities and other areas of greatest need. Community Affairs offices are located in Washington, D.C., and each of its five regional offices.

The OTS supports the efforts of its regulated financial institutions in the microenterprise arena through financial and technical assistance to intermediaries that promote microenterprise development. Primarily through the Community Affairs Program, the OTS provides outreach, educational and technical assistance to its regulated financial institutions on community development opportunities, program issues and possible partners. The OTS sponsors regional forums and workshops for local thrift institutions to promote opportunities to build partnerships and support community development initiatives such as microenterprise development.

Community Development Revolving Loan Fund Program

The Community Development Revolving Loan Fund (Fund) is a source for below-market rate loans and technical assistance grants to low-income designated credit unions. The loans and technical assistance grants are used to improve credit union operations and service to members.

The Office of Community Development Credit Unions was created in 1994 to administer programs designed to establish, strengthen and improve the operations of small and low-income designated credit unions. To secure the "low-income" designation, a credit union must meet the definition in Section 701.34 of the National Credit Union Administration Rules and Regulations. The section requires documentation that a majority of the credit union's member-households earn less than 80 percent of the national median household income.

Community development credit unions primarily serve residents of distressed and financially underserved areas. Their mission is to empower their members by teaching them principles of money management and saving. This, in turn, helps spur economic development and revitalization of the local communities.

The Office of Community Development Credit Unions administers the Community Development Revolving Loan Fund. The Fund provides reduced-rate loans and technical assistance grants to low-income credit unions to assist them in delivering financial services to their members.

The Bethex Federal Credit Union (Bethex), located in Bronx, New York, has approximately $5 million in assets. The Fund has made two below-market rate loans to Bethex totaling $320,000. The loan proceeds provide funds for the credit union's small business lending and gives Bethex (and other low-income credit unions) the ability to lend to members who may not otherwise qualify for a conventional loan.

An article in the April 15, 1999, edition of The Bronx Times highlighted Bethex's role in community development. The story illustrated how funds from the Community Development Revolving Loan Fund benefited Bethex member Kimberly Arrington and helped her on the road to owning her own business.

Just over five years ago, Ms. Arrington—a single mother of three—was struggling to get by on public assistance. Today, she is the proud owner of Kimberly's Unisex Salon at 749 East 187th Street in the Bronx. According to Ms. Arrington, commercial banks were not interested in underwriting her loan. Her big break came when she visited South Bronx Overall Economic Development Corporation (SOBRO) and was referred to Bethex.

Bethex advised Ms. Arrington during the business loan application process, assisted her in gathering all the necessary financial information, and even lent a hand in purchasing furniture for her salon. She attended a basic business-training course through the Entrepreneurial Assistance Program at SOBRO, courtesy of Bethex.

Bethex has worked closely with Ms. Arrington from the very beginning. Even after Bethex approved her business loan, its support and encouragement continued. Ms. Arrington has now been in business for over a year. When her business hit a seasonal slump, Bethex provided a business loan consultant. The consultant services, made possible by a grant from Citicorp Foundation, helped Ms. Arrington reorganize her books, review her marketing and organizational structure, revise certain business strategies and work out miscellaneous financial issues.

Bethex is fortunate to have the on-site volunteer services of an AmeriCorps*VISTA program member, who assists loan recipients from business start-up to day-to-day support. The AmeriCorps*VISTA member serves as a liaison between the credit union and the microentrepreneur. Working as a team with the credit union's business loan consultant, the AmeriCorps*VISTA member provides valuable input to the financial side of the project. Since small business support is a primary focus of the AmeriCorps*VISTA member's service at Bethex, the member can devote the hours and energy necessary supporting the microentrepreneur.

Ms. Arrington is the first in her family to own a business. After a year in operation, she now has three employees—an indication of her success. "Bethex really helped make my dream come true," she said.

Results

Bethex began focusing on small business development in its community around 1989. At that time, the credit union had under $1 million in assets and received few grants. Its first small business loan of $2,000 went to a woman who invested in a hot dog wagon. Through hard work and cooperation between the credit union and its members—made possible by a unique blend of federal funds, AmeriCorps*VISTA volunteers and private grants—Bethex has developed a program that benefits all concerned. Through funds made available by the Community Development Revolving Loan Fund, Bethex has been able to build a successful, inclusive program aimed at potential microentrepreneurs.

Key Players and Their Contributions

Bethex Federal Credit Union

The Bethex Federal Credit Union—a community-based financial cooperative—is a non-profit organization whose mission is to serve the needs of its members. Like a bank, the credit union offers its members many financial services such as savings accounts, checking accounts, credit cards and multiple loan products. Through its emphasis on microenterprise, Bethex helps build a stable community by lending money and providing technical assistance to microentrepreneurs. Members and employees are actively encouraged to patronize the microentrepreneurs—this emphasis provides additional incentive and support.

South Bronx Overall Economic Development Corporation (SOBRO)

The South Bronx Overall Economic Development Corporation (SOBRO) is a non-profit, grant-supported community development, job education and training firm. It was founded on the belief that the problems of abandonment and poverty in the South Bronx must be addressed by providing job skills and bringing business—and, therefore, jobs—back to the community. SOBRO provides technical, financing and consulting assistance to local companies. Its workshops, seminars and small business training are a cornerstone of microenterprise development in the Bronx.

AmeriCorps*VISTA

AmeriCorps*VISTA members volunteer to work in disadvantaged communities full-time for one year. Members are assigned to local public and private non-profit organizations and work toward meeting community needs determined by the community.

Funding: Sources and Uses

National Credit Union Administration

Congress established the Community Development Revolving Loan Fund in 1979 through a $6 million appropriation aimed at stimulating economic development in low-income communities. In 1986, the National Credit Union Administration (NCUA) was charged with sole administration of the Fund. The NCUA Board adopted amendments to Part 705 of NCUA Rules and Regulations on September 16, 1987, and began making loans/deposits to participating credit unions in 1990. Since that time, the revolving loan fund has generated nearly $22 million in loans. Congress recently appropriated an additional $4 million to the Fund, raising its assets to nearly $12 million.

AmeriCorps*VISTA

AmeriCorps*VISTA has been meeting the needs of low-income communities since 1965, when President Lyndon B. Johnson established it as "Volunteers in Service to America" (VISTA). VISTA became part of AmeriCorps in 1993. The Corporation for National Service (located at 1201 New York Avenue, NW, Washington, D.C. 20525) oversees the AmeriCorps*VISTA program, which is Congressionally funded through the Domestic Volunteer Service Act (42 U.S.C. § 4950 et. seq.).

Citigroup Foundation

A grant from Citigroup Foundation provides the funds for a business loan consultant to assist microentrepreneurs on an individual, as-needed basis. Available support includes marketing and organizational assistance.

Special Considerations

Through a hands-on approach aimed at building the business strengths of its members, Bethex has guided Ms. Arrington and other microentrepreneurs toward reaching their goals. Bethex is a relatively small credit union, yet it is able to successfully participate in the growth and development of the community it serves. Marketing and outreach activities are crucial in this effort. Above all, Bethex has the desire and determination to find a way to effectively service its loan applicants.

Capital Works provides microenterpreneurs across Delaware access to capital and developmental training.

Background and Overview

Capital Works is a replica of Working Capital, the largest microloan program in the United States and the 1997 recipient of the first Presidential Award for Excellence in Microenterprise Development.

With Working Capital as a model, the YWCA of New Castle County, Delaware, and the First State Community Loan Fund partnered in 1994 to serve the needs of small community-based businesses in the state. Through the partnership, Capital Works was born. Capital Works provides loans to a wide spectrum of microentrepreneurs including caterers, day care centers, seamstresses, screen printers and computer specialists. It also supports home businesses, storefront businesses and street vendors.

When it began, Capital Works was supported by grants from Delaware's Economic Development Office and the United States Department of Agriculture, with the state of Delaware providing the core funding. A grant from the Rural Business-Cooperative Service of the United States Department of Agriculture allowed Capital Works to expand from northern Delaware through the rest of the state. Capital Works has also solicited volunteer contributions from local banks, which give needed support for program operations.

Microentrepreneurs can take advantage of Capital Works' opportunities through two different lending programs: Team Success and Owner Option.

Any self-employed business owner can apply to participate in the Team Success Loan Program. For most participants, a Team Success loan is their first business loan. Team Success loans help self-employed entrepreneurs with limited financial resources build a credit history, expand their business network, obtain loans and increase business-related skills.

As the name implies, Team Success is a peer-based microenterprise-lending program in which business owners work in teams of 3 to 10 members. Each team, self-selected and self-directed, acts as a support group, a lending committee and a networking vehicle. It elects its own officers, develops by-laws, and meets regularly to share insights, talents, skills and experiences.

The program is structured to inspire both individual and group achievement. Members have access to loans of $500 to $6,000 in set increments. Among other things, a participant must successfully complete successive business-training modules—with topics ranging from basic business recordkeeping to accounting analysis—to satisfy the loan requirements at each level.

The individual's success is tied to the group. Each group member's ability to borrow is frozen if one member falls behind on loan payments. The group support helps ensure that loan payments are made timely. Moreover, through shared responsibility and mutual support, Team Success members build their businesses through access to additional capital, and enhance their credit standing by making regular loan payments.

The Owner Option Loan Program is designed to increase economic opportunity to more established microbusinesses in Delaware. Microentrepreneurs may borrow from $1,500 to $10,000, depending on their ability to meet the lending criteria. A Capital Works staff member conducts an assessment of the business and a site visit; an acceptable credit history and collateral are required. A loan committee of senior YWCA and First State Community Loan Fund staff reviews the loan application. In the Owner Option program, microentrepreneurs receive an incentive (a discount on their loans' annual percentage rates) to participate in the programs of the MicroBusiness Chamber of Commerce, the YWCA's sister microenterprise initiative. Capital Works operates in conjunction with the MicroBusiness Chamber of Commerce to offer networking events, educational seminars, Internet training and marketing assistance.

"Starrlite Travel & Tour" is one of many Capital Works success stories in rural southern Delaware. After working in a travel agency for about eight years, Starr Hargraves recognized a void in the market for travel and tour services in her area—and decided she could fill it.

Starr Hargraves (right) proudly shows her new office to Brenda Whitehurst of Capital Works.

After hearing about Capital Works, Starr attended an informational meeting in January 1999. There she met two other hopeful microentrepreneurs, and they formed a loan group. After she completed the program's group development phase in March 1999, Starr received her first loan, quit her job and opened her own office.

During its first year, Starrlite Travel & Tour grossed sales exceeding $40,000. Starr has hired full- and part-time employees, and is purchasing her own 21-seat motor coach for tours. She continues to participate in Capital Works and has advanced three steps on the loan-eligibility ladder.

Starr attributes her success to her spiritual relationship, her family and Capital Works. Interaction with other Capital Works members gives Starr the support she needs in marketing and building a customer base. Her first brochure is being developed and printed by a fellow Capital Works member. Starr says, "It just keeps getting better and better."

The combination of Capital Works and the MicroBusiness Chamber of Commerce at the YWCA represents an innovative model for microenterprise development. The availability of both group and individual microloans designed to meet the immediate financial needs of businesses, coupled with access to market strategy, presents a unique microloan strategy. Supported by business growth through training, technical assistance, procurement and links to the larger business community, these programs have become a national model of excellence and a mainstay for Delaware-based microbusinesses.

In 1998, the Delaware Economic Development Office surveyed 100 businesses participating in Capital Works to determine whether the program was having a positive impact on business operations. The survey focused on issues and challenges reported by participants when they joined the program. According to the survey results:

- 96% reported better access to business funding;
- 94% reported the ability to develop a sound business plan;
- 85% reported increased access to outside business resources;
- 85% reported a greater ability to find other businesses to address common challenges or to pursue joint opportunities;
- 71% reported better access to supplies and equipment;

- 70% indicated increased traffic to their business;
- 70% indicated an average monthly sales increase of $1,250 or more; and
- 40% increased their line of products/services.

The Cooperative Business Assistance Corporation Microloan Program

The Cooperative Business Assistance Corporation is a private nonprofit organization that provides business financing and creates jobs in the South New Jersey region.

Background and Overview

The Economic Development Administration's Revolving Loan Fund provides economically distressed communities with a flexible and continuing source of capital. Coupled with other economic development tools, the program contributes to long-term economic stability and growth in the communities it serves. Grants to capitalize or recapitalize a Revolving Loan Fund are awarded to local governments, regional development organizations and states. Revolving Loan Fund financing is expected to be strategically targeted to those industrial sectors, businesses and investments that, individually and collectively over time, will increase the competitiveness of local industries and individual businesses and strengthen the economic base.

The Cooperative Business Assistance Corporation (CBAC) in Camden, New Jersey, is a certified Community Development Financial Institution providing market or below-market rate business loans and technical assistance to small businesses located in or moving into the South Jersey region, primarily Camden, Gloucester and Atlantic Counties. The CBAC also encourages private investment in the city of Camden by leveraging public funds with private funds it obtains through loan participations with partner banks in the area.

The CBAC began offering micro-loans in 1993 with funding from the Economic Development Administration. The portfolio has grown to over $800,000. The corporation recently employed an accounting assistant to oversee the bookkeeping and financial accounting of its microloan borrowers, which helps the businesses become more successful and prevents possible loan losses to the revolving loan fund. The CBAC can now be more proactive and identify potential accounting problems before they negatively impact the microbusinesses.

The CBAC offers six different loan products to meet the needs of urban businesses located primarily in Camden, New Jersey. Its micro-loan programs are especially suited to small start-up or smaller businesses with financing requirements up to $30,000.

Santana's Bakery, located in a small shop on River Road in Camden, is one of many microloan fund success stories. The bakery's owner, Elizabeth Santana, began working with the CBAC in the fall of 1998. Her first $10,000 microloan purchased baking equipment and furnished working capital to start her Hispanic bakery. After six months of increasing sales, Ms. Santana received a second loan of $8,000 to buy a larger oven for the bakery.

Over the first two years, the business's annual sales grew from $70,000 to $152,000. In spring 2000, Ms. Santana began expanding her business again. Her goal is to boost sales yet again by selling bread to stores and restaurants wholesale. Already she has 12 daily stops for her products. Ms. Santana is guided by the training and marketing support she has received through the CBAC's assistance. She has calculated that "578 loaves is breakeven for the new wholesale store." Ms. Santana's success is also benefiting others. With bakery sales increasing, Ms. Santana found she needed more help. The bakery now has four employees, and is off to an ambitious start.

Results

Since the inception of the CBAC's microloan program, the corporation has funded 79 microloans, totaling over $1 million, with capital from the Economic Development Administration and additional matching funds. The CBAC's current microloan portfolio contains 42 loans valued at over $400,000. To date, 85 percent of the microloan borrowers are still in business, and 69 percent of the microloans have been made to minority- and women-owned businesses.

Key Players and Their Contributions

The Cooperative Business Assistance Corporation partners with seven area banks that provide additional loan capital, make contributions toward meeting administrative expenses and promote private investment through loan participations. Bank employees serve on the CBAC's Board. The partner banks are Commerce, First Union National, Summit, Hudson, Sun National, Mellon, and PNC.

The corporation also provides access to technical, accounting and marketing support for its business borrowers through the services of the Latin American Economic Development Association, New Jersey Economic Development Authority, Empowerment Zone Business Services, and Regional Small Business Development Corporation. The CBAC works in partnership with these organizations in teaching and mentoring entrepreneurs, developing business plans and obtaining funding for the businesses.

Funding: Sources and Uses

In addition to the funds provided by the Economic Development Administration of the United States Department of Commerce, the Cooperative Business Assistance Corporation receives additional funding for its microloan and other loan pools from various organizations and foundations, including the:

- United States Department of Housing and Urban Development
- United States Small Business Administration
- United States Department of Treasury
- New Jersey Fund for Community Economic Development, and
- New Jersey Urban Enterprise Zone Authority.

Special Considerations

Santana's Bakery's success is representative of many clients of the Cooperative Business Assistance Corporation. Elizabeth Santana has been able to move from working for others to supporting herself, and employing others, in a very short time.

Many microloan clients are, however, unable to support themselves on start-up business revenues until their fourth or fifth year of operation. Some CBAC clients choose to operate part-time businesses for the life of the loan, and beyond. Others, like Ms. Santana, find they are able to be self-supporting very quickly and are natural entrepreneurs.

Salin Santana's talents as a baker contribute to the bakery's success.

To assist refugees in becoming economically self-sufficient through self-employment and to help refugee communities in developing employment opportunities and capital resources by providing business training, technical assistance and credit access.

Background and Overview

The Office of Refugee Resettlement (ORR) began supporting microenterprise programs for refugees in 1991. The office provides grants to mutual assistance associations, voluntary resettlement agencies, microenterprise organizations, other community-based organizations and state governments. Most of the refugees serviced by the program have limited English language proficiency, little or no established credit, few if any assets, and little or no American business experience. The program has assisted over 800 microbusinesses, more than 600 of which are newly established businesses. More than 4,000 refugees have gained entrepreneurial skills and knowledge through the program.

ORR also provides a grant to the Institute for Social and Economic Development (ISED), which helps organizations that receive ORR microenterprise grants to maximize their program performance. It works with organizations on program design, effective linkages with the refugee community, and organizational issues through site visits to the agencies, and telephone and e-mail consultation. ISED also facilitates shared learning among the grantee agencies in semiannual workshops and computer linkages via a listserv.

Coastal Enterprises, Inc. (CEI) is a private, non-profit community development corporation and community development financial institution located in Maine. Throughout the state, CEI provides financing and technical assistance in developing medium, small and microenterprises; community facilities, such as child care; and affordable housing. In 1991, CEI received its first funding from ORR for the New Americans Microenterprise (NAME) Project.

Mahfuz Fulli works hard to keep all his accounts in order.

Project NAME was a collaborative effort involving CEI, Catholic Charities Maine Refugee Resettlement Program, Portland Adult Community Education, and Maine Centers for Women, Work and Community. Program services included classroom training, one-on-one technical assistance and access to credit through CEI and other sources.

CEI continues to assist the refugee community in the greater Portland area through its current program, StartSmart, which operates in partnership with Catholic Charities Maine Refugee and Immigration Services and Casco Bay Partnership for Workplace Education. Like Project NAME, StartSmart promotes the economic self-sufficiency of refugees with literacy-sensitive group training in business plan development and business management. Individual business counseling is also offered to address specific issues. Support for new microentrepreneurs does not end with the completion of their initial business training.

StartSmart staff work diligently to develop long-term relationships with clients by providing ongoing support, training and access to capital and loans.

Since 1991, 164 refugees from over 20 countries have received business training and technical assistance through CEI, resulting in the start-up, strengthening or expansion of 35 businesses. Seven refugee-owned businesses have received nine loans totaling $42,950.

The experience of one young Ethiopian refugee illustrates the impact of this type of project. Mahfuz Fulli approached CEI in 1992 with two business ideas. He participated in business training and learned to assess the feasibility, viability, risks and rewards of his business ideas. Based on this assessment, he decided to open a commercial cleaning business. At the business-training graduation, he was introduced to a member of the Project NAME Advisory Committee who had a residential cleaning business and offered him support. She became his mentor and helped him develop industry-specific expertise. She also introduced him to the owner of a commercial cleaning business, whom Mahfuz was able to "job shadow" for three months learning through experience how to run a cleaning business.

Mahfuz started his business on a part-time basis while continuing his employment. Working with borrowed equipment, he reached a level of $18,000 in sales per year. It became apparent that he would need to acquire his own equipment if his business was to expand. In 1993, he applied to CEI for a $6,500 loan. He had a good plan for making the transition from a part-time to a full-time business. However, he had no credit history and inadequate collateral. CEI granted the loan.

The business continued to grow, and in July 1996 Mahfuz received a second loan of $15,000 to finance his business expansion. In the intervening period, he successfully made the transition to a full-time business, which became his sole source of support. He created one part-time and two full-time jobs for members of his community. He also obtained a mortgage from a local financial institution to finance the purchase of a house, brought over his fiancé from his native Ethiopia and started a family.

With hard work and substantial support from CEI, Mahfuz was able to grow his business. He built its internal capacity, while increasing the scale and complexity of contracts and maintaining a competitive advantage by offering quality services at a reasonable price. His business continues to flourish. He is an active member of the business community and remains both a participant and supporter in CEI's refugee microenterprise program.

Results

With support from the Office of Refugee Resettlement, CEI has translated its experience in providing microenterprise development services into a program targeted to refugees. CEI continues to provide assistance to refugees interested in microenterprise as a path to economic self-sufficiency. In addition, CEI has been able to leverage ORR support with private funds and to expand its services to the immigrant community.

Key Players and Their Contributions

Coastal Enterprises, Inc.

Coastal Enterprises, Inc. is a private, non-profit community development corporation. Its primary activity is providing financing and technical assistance to small businesses that offer income, employment and ownership opportunities to low-income people in Maine. CEI has been actively involved in microenterprise development since the mid-1980's; it has provided training and technical assistance to 10,000 new and existing entrepreneurs and provided roughly $7 million in loans to more than 500 micro-businesses. CEI is the lead agency in coordinating the work of collaborating organizations, and providing training, technical assistance and access to business financing.

Catholic Charities Maine Refugee and Immigration Services

Catholic Charities Maine Refugee and Immigration Services (RIS) (formerly Refugee Resettlement Program) is the resettlement agency in Maine and serves approximately 200 newly arrived refugees each year. RIS provides support in outreach and recruitment, case management, interpreter services, consultation in cultural issues and critical linkages to employment opportunities for individuals who choose not to pursue self-employment.

Casco Bay Partnership for Workplace Education

Casco Bay Partnership for Workplace Education (CBP) is a regional resource for participatory, learner-centered workplace education. CBP has expertise in adult education, including working with students who are linguistically and culturally diverse. CBP provides assistance in ensuring that training and project materials are culturally sensitive and linguistically appropriate to the population it serves.

Institute for Social and Economic Development

The Institute for Social and Economic Development (ISED) consults with the CEI refugee microenterprise program. During annual site visits, ISED staff members speak with refugee clients and meet with the project team to discuss implementation progress and issues, provide insights, and share the approaches various other grantee agencies are using to address problems that CEI is facing. CEI project team members attend the semi-annual ORR microenterprise grantee workshops. The team has access to other microenterprise programs via the grantee listserv and to ISED consultation services via telephone and e-mail.

Maine Centers for Women, Work and Community

Maine Centers for Women, Work and Community provides a range of employment and career development services. It created a model curriculum for an intensive business planning training program that was used as the basis for the training provided in Project NAME.

Portland Adult Community Education

Portland Adult Community Education (PACE) offers a wide range of vocational and educational training to adults throughout the greater Portland area. PACE provides vocational education for refugee and immigrant populations and offers classes in "English as a Second Language."

Funding: Sources and Users

Office of Refugee Resettlement

The Office of Refugee Resettlement is authorized under the Immigration and Nationality Act to award grants; contract with public and private, non-profit agencies to help refugees obtain the skills necessary to reach economic self-sufficiency; and make loans for the purpose of carrying out its responsibilities.

Funding from ORR covers the cost of training and technical assistance. It was also the source of capital for loan funds in CEI's refugee microenterprise programs.

Special Considerations

By providing funding for microenterprise development targeted specifically to refugees over the past nine years, ORR has achieved several goals: It has opened opportunities for refugees to become economically self-sufficient. It has leveraged additional funds from local banks and other funding and business financing sources. It has also encouraged the entire microenterprise industry in the United States to recognize the refugee segment of the population, stimulating significant activity beyond its funding.

Working Smart

The city of Nashville seeks to assist residents of the Nashville Enterprise Community, particularly residents of public housing, in achieving economic self-sufficiency by providing training opportunities and other related services that pertain to small business and microenterprise development.

The Nashville Enterprise Community is comprised of several census tracts in South Nashville, designated by the United States Department of Housing and Urban Development in 1994 for economic and community development.

Background and Overview

The signature piece of the Nashville Enterprise Community's economic development strategy was the construction of an economic development center—the Southside Enterprise Center (Center). It was built within the Nashville Enterprise Community and houses a variety of economic development and community services programs. Housing the Center's services in a neighborhood facility allows more efficient service delivery and coordination, and is more convenient for Enterprise Community residents. Through the Nashville Enterprise Community Program, funds are channeled for economic development in low- and moderate-income neighborhoods.

The Center opened its doors the first week of August 1996, and is fully leased to non-profit organizations, government agencies and several microenterprises. A variety of job-related services is available at the Center. For example, residents can participate in a life skills/personal development training course, enter a job or entrepreneurial training program, and receive placement assistance.

One of the more successful programs operating out of the Center is the Metropolitan Development and Housing Agency's "Working Smart" program. Working Smart outfits people with skills, technical help and money to start a micro-business through an eight-week entrepreneurial training program offering classroom training in topics ranging from accounting and taxes to sales. Training focuses on both personal development and business development. Participants are schooled in such areas as self-motivation, conflict resolution, image building, finance and marketing fundamentals, personnel management, and customer service. Participants also prepare professional business plans.

The foundation of Working Smart's growth in the microenterprise area was provided through a grant from the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) to Nashville's Metropolitan Development and Housing Agency. Five local banks also donated funds for a revolving loan pool and, in the program's infancy, additional funds needed for training participants. The revolving loan fund is available to program graduates with sound business ideas. At the start of the program, participants present their ideas to a loan committee. The loan committee is comprised of staff from the Metropolitan Development and Housing Agency and the Entrepreneur Guidance and Training, Inc., as well as various lender representatives. The committee provides feedback on the idea's feasibility as well as the applicant's credit history and likelihood of qualifying for a loan. Loans are granted in amounts up to $6,000 for startup costs at the prime rate, plus 2 percent.

Nashville resident Nella Pearl Frierson could not be more pleased with the Working Smart program. This participant combined the business skills she learned in the program with initiative, ingenuity and braiding skills taught by her mother. Ms. Frierson is now the proud owner of Pearl's Braid Shop in South Nashville. Ms. Frierson, a single mother of five, depended on welfare payments for about 15 years before discovering Working Smart. She supplemented her welfare payments by braiding the hair of customers who came to her home. Working Smart taught Ms. Frierson the necessary business skills and the basics of setting up and operating a business. The program even assisted her in finding commercial space for her new venture.

Upon graduating from Working Smart, Ms. Frierson left her front porch and opened her own shop on Lewis Street in Nashville. She built a solid client base and soon found her business had outgrown her work space. With additional assistance from Working Smart, Ms. Frierson relocated to a larger shop at the Southside Enterprise Center on Lafayette Street, and her clients followed. By applying the business skills she acquired in the Working Smart program, her business expanded and others in the community are benefiting from her entrepreneurial skills. Pearl's Braid Shop now employs at least two part-time employees, and its gross annual earnings continue to grow.

Ms. Frierson has come a long way—from braiding hair to supplement her welfare checks in a public housing project, to owning a thriving business and her own home. Ms. Frierson's dreams have come true, thanks to Working Smart and the Metropolitan Development and Housing Agency's home ownership training and lease purchase program.

Ms. Frierson's story is just one example of Working Smart's successes, but it exemplifies what the program can achieve for its participants—and the community.

Results

HUD has recognized the Nashville Enterprise Community as a top national performer. Working Smart graduates have been profiled in the local press and in the New York Times. More than 96 people have completed the Working Smart training program, and 37 startup loans have been made. These businesses are now providing services and goods to their communities, including hair care, landscaping, baked goods, auto detailing, computer services and clothing.

Key Players and Their Contributions

Working Smart graduates successfully complete an 8 week micro-business training program.

Metropolitan Development and Housing Agency

The Metropolitan Development and Housing Agency is the local agency responsible for administering the Enterprise Community and Community Development Block Grant programs in Nashville-Davidson County. For the Working Smart program, the Metropolitan Development and Housing Agency contracts with Entrepreneur Guidance and Training, Inc. to operate the required training program, and to service the loans. The Metropolitan Development and Housing Agency manages the loan funds and the loan portfolio.

Entrepreneur Guidance and Training, Inc.

Entrepreneur Guidance and Training, Inc. operates the training program required for all Working Smart participants, and services the loans to participants. It advertises the Working Smart program in the community to recruit potential participants, develops the training modules and conducts all classroom and workshop sessions. Entrepreneur Guidance and Training, Inc. also provides technical assistance to Working Smart graduates throughout the initial stages of their new businesses.

Five Nashville banks provide financial contributions and many valuable services to Working Smart. Through the program, banks can have a positive impact on a portion of the community they might not otherwise reach through conventional small business lending. As illustrated by their comments below, the banks are an integral part of Working Smart, and their enthusiasm is unmistakable.

AmSouth — AmSouth's financial support is just one element of its successful partnership with the Working Smart program. AmSouth also provides ongoing technical assistance, board and committee oversight, and staff training. Its many volunteers have received a personal sense of satisfaction seeing the Working Smart program participants grow into successful business owners. AmSouth participates in numerous microenterprise programs across its nine-state market area. Working Smart serves as AmSouth's prime model of success, efficiency and true community development through a partnership that brings the diverse resources of a community together to improve its quality of life.

Bank of America — Bank of America has participated in Working Smart since the program's inception. Following its initial cash pledge of $50,000 over a five-year period, Bank of America branched into other areas of support. It furnishes classroom training materials, and a Bank of America employee volunteers to serve on the program's Loan Committee. Working Smart participants are also welcome at the Bank of America-sponsored Small Business Resource Center. This separate resource supports the Working Smart program with business planning assistance and guidance. Working Smart provides Bank of America with an avenue of support for the true small business entrepreneur in his or her quest to succeed.

First Union Bank — First Union makes an annual financial contribution to the Working Smart loan pool, and its representatives serve on the Selection and the Loan Review Committees. The Selection Committee is a unique part of Working Smart. Candidates present a business idea to this committee, whose members draw on their banking and community experiences to point out the proposal's strengths and weaknesses and give direction in developing a business plan. The Selection Committee also reviews a candidate's credit report and, if necessary, makes suggestions to improve credit standing prior to the candidate applying for a loan. Working Smart is one of over 30 microlending initiatives supported by First Union throughout its operation region.

SunTrust Bank — SunTrust is an active participant on Working Smart's Loan Advisory Council, thanks to the volunteer services of its employees. The Loan Advisory Council interviews prospective participants and reviews their proposed business plans, personal financial condition and credit bureau reports. Bank employees also teach classes on various banking topics. SunTrust Bank makes annual financial contributions in support of the day-to-day operations of the Working Smart program, as well as to the Metropolitan Development and Housing Agency's loan pool.

Union Planters Bank — Union Planters Bank is proud to be a continuing participant in Nashville's Working Smart program. Since the program's creation, Union Planters has made annual financial contributions of at least $5,000, and its employees have volunteered their services on various committees. The visible, productive results that Working Smart graduates exhibit on both a personal and business level reward the Union Planter employees for their contributions and efforts. Due to the efforts of banks such as Union Planters, Working Smart graduates have re-established their credit and obtained various financial services from the banks that have contributed to their success.

Funding: Sources and Uses

Funds from HHS Social Services Block Grants and HUD Community Development Block Grants are used for training and other services provided by Entrepreneur Guidance and Training, Inc. The loan fund is comprised solely of contributions from participating Nashville banks. Working Smart participants may borrow a maximum of $6,000 for a three-year term.

Special Considerations

Due to its success, the Working Smart program has been replicated in another area of Nashville, outside of the original Enterprise Community. With the success of the Southside Enterprise Center, two more alert centers have opened in the Enterprise Community. These centers are similar in concept but more focused on the delivery of basic services, including community policing, code inspections, social services and welfare-to-work offices.

To offer dislocated workers (those identified as having difficulty becoming reemployed) the opportunity to start their own businesses.

Background and Overview

Congress enacted federal legislation in 1993 authorizing states to offer unemployed individuals assistance in becoming self-employed as an option under the State unemployment insurance program. The Self-Employment Assistance Program—born from the legislation—provides certain eligible individuals the opportunity to start their own businesses while collecting payments equivalent to unemployment insurance benefits.

New York was the first state to establish a Self-Employment Assistance Program. The United States Department of Labor approved the state's plan in 1995, and it has since become a model program for other states.

Participation in a Self-Employment Assistance Program is not automatic. Applicants are chosen if they are identified as likely to exhaust their unemployment benefits for reasons such as they have obsolete skills or occupations, or find themselves the victims of plant shutdowns or mass layoffs. Participants in New York's Self-Employment Assistance Program face long-term unemployment essentially because the job market no longer needs their skills and experience. Many participants were previously employed in professional, technical or managerial occupations.

Potential participants must first fulfill the eligibility and application requirements. For example, applicants must be at least 18 years old, agree to locate their businesses in New York and cannot have received more than 12 unemployment insurance payments in their current period of benefits. Once accepted into the Self-Employment Assistance Program, participants must complete the program's educational component, which includes at least 20 hours of entrepreneurial training in such topics as starting a business, developing a business plan, marketing strategies, financing and taxes.

Program participants are excused from the unemployment insurance Program's full-time work-search requirement so they can work full-time at starting a business. In lieu of receiving normal unemployment insurance payments, participants receive Self-Employment Assistance payments in the same manner and duration as normal unemployment insurance payments. However, benefit extensions are not available to Self-Employment Assistance participants.

Victoria Fox of Syracuse, New York, is one example of the thousands of formerly unemployed workers who have successfully completed the Self-Employment Assistance Program. Victoria had been employed for many years by a company that underwent a corporate downsizing and laid off over 700 employees, Victoria among them. While standing in line to file for unemployment insurance benefits, Victoria pictured herself on the road to fulfilling a lifelong dream—a thought not many would have under such dire circumstances, but one shared by three of her unemployed co-workers.

The four former co-workers heard about the Self-Employment Assistance Program in a reemployment workshop, and decided to take a chance starting their own business. Victoria applied and was accepted to the Self-Employment Assistance Program, then received counseling and technical assistance through the state of New York's Small Business Development Center (a process she says was very helpful). While starting her business, she had the added support of 26 weeks worth of unemployment insurance benefits.

Today, five years later, Victoria and her co-workers are still in business. Their company, Accessibility Solutions, Inc., is a provider of a wide range of accessibility lifting equipment for the disabled. Its products help break the barriers caused by stairways and entranceways, both indoors and out. Victoria is the President of Accessibility Solutions, Inc. and her co-workers are the company's officers. Each person contributes his or her particular area of expertise.

Accessibility Solutions' 1999 receipts far surpassed $1 million. Victoria takes great pride in having faced the challenge of long-term unemployment by establishing her own business, and creating job opportunities for others. The unemployment insurance office is a distant memory for Victoria these days, but she will always be grateful for being given the chance to create Accessibility Solutions, Inc. while on unemployment insurance benefits.

Victoria is one example of a company grossing well over $1 million in 1999, but many other program participants have had similar successes. Even those earning less are thrilled and proud to have an enterprise that they started themselves.

Results

In New York state, nearly 8,000 participants have completed the Self-Employment Assistance Program. Sixty-eight percent have started a small business that has become their primary source of income. Another 12 percent have started a small business that they supplement with a wage and salary job. And 11 percent have found wage and salary employment resulting from their participation in the Self-Employment Assistance Program. These results have been consistent for every year that surveys have been sent to former participants. Businesses have emerged in every region around the state, and in every conceivable industry and service. The types of businesses range from computer services, to farms, to auto dealerships and banks. The top performing business grossed well over $2 million in 1999, and employed 16 persons.

Key Players and Their Contributions

New York State Small Business Development Center

In every region around the state, the local Small Business Development Center partners with the New York Department of Labor to provide workshops, training and counseling. The tremendous success of the Self-Employment Assistance Program is a direct result of the centers' active participation, which provide free confidential, personalized counseling for both start-up and existing businesses.

Service Corps of Retired Executives

The Service Corps of Retired Executives (SCORE) is a national nonprofit association comprised of over 12,000 volunteers who donate their time to assist aspiring entrepreneurs. SCORE members are working or retired business owners, business executives or operations managers. SCORE provides business counseling, conducts low-cost workshops focusing on various aspects of operating a successful business, and runs a CyberChapter to provide e-mail answers to business questions (<http://www.score.org>).

Cornell University's Cooperative Extension Program

Cornell University runs Small Business Start-up workshops across New York state. The attendance cost is nominal, and often free. Many locations offer specialized services geared toward agricultural businesses.

One of the many products available from Accessibility Solution, Inc.

Internal Revenue Service

The Community Relations Office of the Internal Revenue Service works with New York's Self-Employment Assistance Program to provide free one-day sessions for small business owners. The curriculum covers "everything you need to know" about business practices from the Internal Revenue Service's perspective.

Funding: Sources and Uses

The 1993 federal legislation allowing states to establish a Self-Employment Assistance Program did not include a dedicated funding stream to run the programs. New York state runs its program with a combination of administrative funding from various sources, all administered by the United States Department of Labor.

Unemployment insurance funds are used to pay the Self-Employment Assistance program participants.

Under the Wagner-Peyser Act, the United States Department of Labor is charged with allocating funds to states for establishing and maintaining state employment service offices, which provide a wide range of labor-exchange services and information to job seekers. Under the Act, the funds may also be used for services and activities related to the Self-Employment Assistance Program.

Finally, the United States Department of Labor's Dislocated Worker program provides states with funds for employment and training services to assist dislocated workers in finding new jobs. The program also provides some funds to the New York State Small Business Development Centers to help offset the cost of providing services to Self-Employment Assistance Program participants.

Special Consideration

The New York State Self-Employment Assistance Program has received national recognition. In 1994, the Interstate Conference of Employment Security Administrators presented its top award for innovations in employment, the Architect of Change Award, to the New York State Department of Labor. The award included a $25,000 stipend to benefit the program. The Small Business Administration awarded its 1998 Vision 2000 State Model of Excellence Award for the outstanding work of the New York State Department of Labor and the New York State Small Business Development Centers for Self-Employment Assistance Program participants.

The Northeast Entrepreneur Fund fosters an entrepreneurial spirit and encourages economic self-sufficiency through the growth of small business and self-employment opportunities in northeastern Minnesota.

Background and Overview

The Community Development Financial Institutions Fund (CDFI Fund) designates organizations as Community Development Financial Institutions (CDFIs), which are specialized financial institutions that work in market niches that have not been adequately served by traditional financial institutions. CDFIs provide a range of financial products and services, including mortgage financing for first-time homebuyers, financing for community facilities, commercial loans and investments to start or expand small businesses, loans to rehabilitate rental housing, and financial services needed by low-income households and local businesses. CDFIs also provide services that help ensure that credit is used effectively, such as technical assistance to small businesses and credit counseling to consumers. CDFIs vary by organization type and include community development banks, credit unions, loan funds, venture capital funds and microenterprise loan funds.

The Northeast Entrepreneur Fund is a CDFI created in 1989 to provide loans and guidance to start-up and existing small businesses in northeastern Minnesota. It provides training, technical assistance and financing to microenterprises and small business owners. The Fund serves a predominantly rural region that spans seven counties covering over 20,000 square miles, and has a population of 310,000.

Economic restructuring and permanent job loss during the early 1980s had a devastating effect on the regional economy, which was based on natural resources—primarily iron mining—and tourism. The Northeast Entrepreneur Fund was part of a regional effort to support homegrown companies and diversify the economy of northeastern Minnesota. Its founders recognized that many jobs would not return to the region even when the iron mining industry recovered. So, individuals needed to start their own businesses and become self-reliant. By nurturing small businesses with loans and technical assistance, the Fund hopes to encourage entrepreneurial thinking and create local prosperity and job opportunities.

Customers of the Northeast Entrepreneur Fund are typically unemployed or under employed individuals who lack access to traditional business development resources, but have the desire to start or expand businesses to provide for them and their families. The Fund offers loans to existing and prospective small business owners using a flexible array of loan products. It also provides business-development services such as one-to-one consulting, technical assistance and training programs.

Products and services of the Northeast Entrepreneur Fund are not restricted to low-income individuals, but the Fund has succeeded in attracting low-income individuals through its marketing activities and income-based fee schedules. Individuals without access to traditional sources of credit due to poor credit history, lack of business experience, or insufficient equity or collateral are also eligible for funding. For businesses that require funding exceeding microloan amounts (average size: $7,785), the Northeast Entrepreneur Fund has expanded its lending limits to $100,000 and partnered with other lenders to address these unmet credit needs.

Adam Makela and his wife, Tina, are one of the many couples in northeastern Minnesota who have attained economic self-sufficiency because of the support and services offered by the Northeast Entrepreneur Fund. Adam started and ran their adult foster care business from a rental home in 1996. The Northeast Entrepreneur Fund, in conjunction with a bank, funded the couple's mortgage to build a new home in 1997. Adam describes how the Northeast Entrepreneur Fund counseled them and helped their business survive:

"My wife, Tina, and I saw a great opportunity to be self-employed by providing a relatively new and necessary service to our community. With a thousand dollar credit card we rented a large home and started our adult foster care business. We lived in the new home with our two children and operated the business in the same site. Our business took off almost immediately.

"We soon found out that without a two-year track record, we did not qualify for the necessary financing to keep our business going. I went to the Northeast Entrepreneur Fund. A year later with a lot of hard work, some 'creative financing,' and a loan from NEF, we built a home to meet the demands of our business. Our business was a success after one year.

"Our second year was a different story. Business did not do as well as expected, and with our heavy debt load (partly due to a few bad decisions on my part), it was a struggle to survive. The stress of the business, among other things, put a heavy strain on our personal and family life. We felt our only option for dealing with our financial issues was to file for bankruptcy. We went to consumer credit counseling and talked to a bankruptcy attorney... no one seemed to offer other choices. I called the Northeast Entrepreneur Fund to let them know that we would be filing bankruptcy. They suggested I come in to talk about the alternatives and to explore all the possible options. I thought they were crazy.

helped me identify my choices..."

Adam Makela

"The Fund helped me identify my choices. I never dreamed that keeping the business would not only be possible, but would be the wisest option. I worked with my creditors and developed a debt service plan. I redesigned how the business would operate and how cash would flow. I got another small loan from the Entrepreneur Fund for some needed home finishing work. Not only did we save the business from bankruptcy, cash flow and profitability were greatly improved.

"After four years the business is doing very well, and our family life is once again stable and healthy. I hired my mom as a full-time employee. We did not file bankruptcy. I am still in business, am operating it effectively and am able to pay all of the bills. The business is not and will not be a dramatic statistic—it is not going to show up anywhere as a failure."

Results

As of December 1999, the Northeast Entrepreneur Fund has:

- trained or provided technical assistance to over 3,200 individuals;
- loaned over $1.8 million to 145 businesses;
- made 80 percent of its loans to low- and moderate-income individuals;
- helped to create or retain 906 jobs through 458 businesses that it has assisted with starting, expanding or stabilizing; and
- recorded a two-year overall business survival rate of 85 percent.

Key Players

The Community Development Financial Institutions Fund is unique among the federal government agencies that provide financial assistance to microenterprises. It interacts directly with the organizations that it supports, and does not use intermediaries such as banks, or state or local governments.

The CDFI Fund has increased its financial support to the Northeast Entrepreneur Fund over time. In 1997, the Northeast Entrepreneur Fund was awarded $285,000 in grants, allowing it to make loans up to $100,000 to small businesses. In 1999, it was awarded additional grants of $368,000, enabling it to provide more flexible loan products to microenterprises and small businesses. Each grant included a technical assistance component increasing its capacity to serve its customers.

The Northeast Entrepreneur Fund also works in partnership with banks and economic development and community organizations to foster entrepreneurial development and business growth in northeastern Minnesota.

Enterprise Development Corporation

is a private, nonprofit economic development corporation serving small businesses in Appalachian

Southeastern Ohio. The corporation

provides business development information to small and microbusinesses, and administers several small business revolving loan funds.

Background and Overview

The United States Small Business Administration (SBA) Microloan Program was approved as a demonstration in October 1991. Through the program, SBA was originally authorized to provide loan and grant funding to up to 35 intermediary lenders. The SBA also funded two grants to training and technical assistance providers to support microentrepreneurs as they worked toward obtaining private-sector financing for their businesses. The original 37 program participants were announced on June 10, 1992. Since then, the Microloan Program has grown to encompass 160 intermediaries and non-lending technical assistance providers. The Microloan Program became permanent in December 1997.

The SBA's Microloan Program was established to assist women, low-income, veteran and minority entrepreneurs, business owners and other individuals with the capability to operate successful business concerns, and to assist small businesses in areas suffering from a lack of credit due to an economic downturn.

Under the program, SBA makes loans to qualified intermediaries which, in turn, provide small-scale loans, typically those averaging $7,500 or less, to start-up, newly established or growing small business concerns for working capital, materials, supplies or equipment. SBA also provides grants to intermediary lenders and other nonprofit organizations for technical assistance to microborrowers, potential microborrowers and low-income individuals seeking loans under $25,000 from private-sector sources.

A small business in need of a microloan must apply directly to the intermediary lender serving its geographic location. It can apply for a microloan if, at time of application, it is a for-profit business that meets SBA business, size and eligibility standards. The maximum term for a microloan is six years. Intermediaries may charge interest based on the microloan's size and the cost of funds from the SBA.

One nonprofit organization participating as an intermediary lender in the SBA Microloan Program is Enterprise Development Corporation (EDC) in The Plains, Ohio. EDC is a multi-faceted financial technical assistance and economic development organization serving the Appalachian region of Ohio. SBA provides funds to EDC in the form of direct and guaranteed loans to establish and maintain the microloan revolving funds. SBA also provides grants for technical assistance.

Since 1992, EDC has provided 122 microloans, totaling $5 million, in the rural Appalachian region of Ohio. The average microloan amount is $8,800. Women have received over 51 percent of EDC's loans. Nearly 65 percent of the microloans have been made to start-up businesses. The majority of microloan borrowers are categorized as low- to moderate-income.

Jeanne Tyson is one of many who have benefited from the SBA's Microloan Program through EDC. In the early 1990s, Jeanne, a single mother on welfare assistance, was encouraged by her father to pursue a career in home health care. With support from her two young daughters, Jeanne went back to school and earned a business degree. Shortly thereafter, she approached EDC. Using the technical assistance provided by EDC and her newly acquired business skills, Jeanne established Royalty Home Health Care in 1994 with financing from her first SBA microloan. Royalty Home Health Care's core business is quality in-home health care. As the business grew, Jeanne was able to take her family off of the welfare rolls and began hiring employees, many of whom had also been on welfare.

Throughout her relationship with EDC, Jeanne has received business-based technical assistance. She worked closely with the organization before receiving her first loan and, in time, received a second loan. Not only did she become a self-supporting microentrepreneur, she became a homeowner as well.

Jeanne Tyson (right) and Gin Anderson review some new forms for program care.

While her client list remained healthy and her capacity as an employer continued, unforeseen events—such as changes in the health care industry—began to put stress on the business. The nationally publicized effort to control rising medical costs led to a change in the formula that public insurance systems use to pay health-care providers. These changes negatively affected Jeanne's accounts receivable, causing her debt burden to increase. Smaller revenues impacted her ability to repay her business start-up loans. But, with EDC's help, Jeanne has continued in business. A renewed plan of follow-up technical assistance is helping Royalty Home Health Care stay on track. A "significant cash flow crunch" continues, but EDC staff believes the company still has "the potential to be quite successful." Post-loan technical assistance will help the business learn how to adjust to changing market conditions. It will also help this microbusiness owner develop a money-management system that will provide for down times in the corporate revenue cycle.

Because of her experiences, initiative and drive, Jeanne was named the 1998 Welfare to Work Small Business Person of the Year.

Results

The SBA's Microloan Program has provided over 9,700 loans of $25,000 or less, and loaned more than $80 million to start-up, newly established and developing small businesses.

According to Enterprise Development Corporation, organizations like EDC "can play a key role in the success of first time small business owners." Microlending intermediaries must have strong in-house systems, coupled with patience and understanding. These qualities are the keys to success for emerging small businesses as they work through revenue crises, market changes and management issues.

Dan Dusterberg, former EDC Executive Director who worked extensively with Ms. Tyson, noted: "Careful, thoughtful and mandatory reporting of corporate fiscal condition are the keys to long term survivability of micro-borrowers. Most are first time borrowers, first time business owners and frequently reluctant to communicate their issues and concerns. Loan officers must be willing to pry, act intuitively and then take decisive action if businesses are to be successful." He added, "Royalty Home Health Care's story is, sadly, not unique. This is what entrepreneurs face every day in the management of their business. Providing the tools for success will help them get through these challenges."

Key Players and Their Contributions

Enterprise Development Corporation

Enterprise Development Corporation is a community-based, nonprofit organization whose mission is to assist small businesses with technical assistance and capital needs in a rural, mountainous and economically isolated region. Through its emphasis on microenterprises, EDC contributes to the local economy by lending money and providing technical assistance to microentrepreneurs.

Funding: Sources and Uses

Enterprise Development Corporation receives funding from federal and state governmental agencies as well as contributions from various private entities.

The SBA provides funds for the Microloan revolving loan fund, as well as direct grants administered by EDC for counseling and technical assistance for microentrepreneurs. EDC also offers other SBA lending programs, including 504, 7(a) and Prequalification loans. In addition, EDC administers revolving loan funds through the United States Department of Agriculture (targeted at intermediaries in the microlending arena) and Community Development Block Grant funds from the United States Department of Health and Human Services (targeted for local economic development, lending and day-care providers).

The state of Ohio, through the Ohio Department of Development, provides grants for technical assistance and follow-up counseling. EDC also loans funds on behalf of the state of Ohio through the Ohio 166/Pioneer program.

EDC receives private-sector funds from the Shashaty Foundation earmarked for a revolving loan fund for small businesses in Columbiana County, Ohio.

Finally, EDC partners with Bank One and National City Bank to foster the economic development and small business lending in Southeastern Ohio.

Special Considerations

Appendices

Microenterprise has a language and terminology all its own. This appendix gives newcomers to the microenterprise world a quick frame of reference to help them understand and evaluate the programs that best suit their circumstances.

The definitions below are stated in broad terms for the sake of simplicity. The reader should be aware that there are variations in microenterprise programs from agency to agency. For this reason, some terms may have slightly different meanings, depending on the nature and focus of each microenterprise program. For example, a “microloan” generally refers to a small amount of credit. However, a microloan may have a cap of $15,000 in one agency’s program, but a $25,000 cap in another program.

Community Development Block Grant

A flexible federal aid that is intended for use by cities and towns to promote neighborhood revitalization, economic development and improved community facilities and services. Specific uses of the funds are left to the discretion of local governments. Funds are administered by either state or city offices of economic development depending on the size of the city or town (see Entitlement Community).

Community Development Corporation

A community-based organization that is owned and controlled by community residents and is engaged in affordable housing, business and/or commercial development. Community development corporations specialize in development and rehabilitation of real estate, investment in business ventures and related activities specifically designed to address the housing, commercial redevelopment, employment and community facilities needs of low- and moderate-income persons and areas. Although they vary in size and scope, the vast majority are nonprofit, tax-exempt organizations. All community development corporations have a board of directors composed of local residents, public officials, funders, bankers, relevant professionals and/or community leaders.

Community Development Loan Fund

A private nonprofit organization that channels private investment capital to community-based organizations and projects. It may operate independently or as part of a community-based organization. Lenders to the fund may have some control over the use of their funds and the rate of interest on their loans, which are generally more flexible than conventional financing. Community development loan funds can also provide borrowers with technical assistance to reduce the chance of losses on higher risk loans. Since community development loan funds are not chartered or licensed, they have flexibility in their organizational structure, although they may be subject to state laws and regulations. In most cases, they are incorporated as 501(c)(3) nonprofit corporation.

Disadvantaged Entrepreneur

A microentrepreneur who is low-income, lacks adequate access to capital or other resources essential for business success, or is economically disadvantaged.

Dislocated Workers

- Individuals who:
- have been terminated or laid off, or have received a notice of termination or layoff from employment; are eligible for or have exhausted their entitlement to unemployment compensation; and are likely to return to their previous industry or occupation;
 - have been terminated or received a notice of termination of employment as a result of any permanent closure of, or any substantial layoff at, a plant, facility or enterprise;
 - are long-term unemployed and have limited opportunities for employment or reemployment in the same or similar occupation in the area in which they reside;
 - were self-employed (including ranchers and farmers) and are unemployed as a result of general economic conditions in their community or because of natural disasters.

Economically Disadvantaged Entrepreneur

Individuals whose ability to compete in the free enterprise system has been impaired due to diminished capital and credit opportunities as compared to others in the same or similar line of business.

Enterprise Zone

An economically depressed area that has been targeted for revitalization by a city or state through tax and other incentives given to companies that locate or expand their operations within the zone.

Entitlement Community

A city or urban community with a population of 50,000 or more, and certain central cities of a metropolitan area as defined by the Office of Management and Budget, that because of its size, receives Community Development Block Grant funds directly from the federal government. Nonentitlement communities receive Community Block Grant funds through the state office of economic development.

Entrepreneur

An individual who organizes, manages and assumes the risks of a business.

Intermediary

An entity that makes and services loans to eligible entrepreneurs, including microentrepreneurs, and to small businesses and provides marketing, management and technical assistance to its borrowers. An intermediary may receive loan or grant funds to establish a revolving loan fund for lending to microentrepreneurs.

Low Income

A certain level of income that is specifically defined by each agency. The criteria and measure of income level required to be designated "low income" vary among the agencies and the programs.

Low-Income Credit Union

A nonprofit credit union that is chartered to serve the members of a lower-income community. The structure is similar to a regular credit union, although as a nonprofit organization it is tax-exempt. Federally chartered low-income credit unions are regulated by the state. Their services vary depending on their level of capitalization. In general, they offer services not provided by mainstream financial institutions such as small loans at below-market rates to individuals who might not otherwise qualify for bank loans. Low-income credit unions rely heavily on banks, foundations and other investors for deposits to support their work.

Median Income

Median income divides the income distribution into two equal parts, one with residents having incomes above the median and the other with residents having incomes below the median. Median family and household incomes are based on the distribution of the total number of units, including those with no income. However, the median income calculation for persons is based on those with income.

Microbusiness

See microenterprise.

Microenterprise

A very small business. Most often, it is a sole proprietorship, partnership, family business, or an incorporated entity that has no more than five employees, including the owner(s), does not have access to conventional loans, equity or other banking services; and requires $25,000 or less for start-up or expansion capital.

Microenterprise Development Organization

A type of intermediary that focuses on microenterprise. An organization - including community development corporations, nonprofit development organizations and social service organizations - that works directly with microentrepreneurs, provides services to aspiring microentrepreneurs and assists them in starting their own business.

Microenterprise Support Organization

An entity that does not work directly with microentrepreneurs as its principal activity, but supports the efforts of microenterprise development organizations through financial assistance, technical assistance, research or other activities.

Microentrepreneur

The owner of a microenterprise or an individual seeking to establish a microenterprise.

Microloan

A small loan, generally less than $25,000, that is made to a microentrepreneur for business purposes.

Microloan Borrower

An individual or a small business that borrows funds from an intermediary or a grantee for the purpose of starting, continuing or enlarging its business.

Moderate Income

A certain level of income that is specifically defined by each agency. The criteria and measure of income level required to be designated "moderate income" vary among the agencies and the programs.

Revolving Loan Fund

In general, a fund structured so that repayments are used to make more loans. The term revolving loan fund is sometimes used interchangeably with community development loan fund. The term is also used specifically to describe a nonprofit loan fund that depends primarily on public money to make housing and small business loans. Terms and rates are typically more favorable than conventional financing. A revolving loan fund can be administered by a nonprofit organization or a public agency and is not overseen by any regulatory agency.

Federal Microenterprise Programs vary in their structure and organization. Some are operated exclusively from the agency's Washington, D.C., headquarters. Other federal agency programs have local and regional offices located throughout the United States. Where a local contact is provided, it is generally the best resource to begin transforming a dream of small business ownership into reality. The directory below lists local contacts who will answer questions you may have regarding their programs and assist you in making the most of microenterprise.
